height windows. Every room combines the traditional features of a patrician villa, with widescreen TVs, wireless internet connection and sumptuous linen bedding. Fresh produce grown in the Cimbrone's herb and vegetable gardens feature in inventive dishes served at the terraced restaurant under the watchful eye of head chef Alberto Annarumma. Highlights include sublime stir-fried turbot with potatoes, capers and spices, and a 'sandwich' of red mullet with baby spinach and bulle (sea snail) sauce. Pasta lovers will enjoy paccheri with oxtail and an Amalfi lemon salad. Don't miss the fine local wines – Fiano di Avellino and Greco di Tufo are just two that have garnered an international reputation. Fresh home-made preserves adorn the breakfast table – try the delicate wisteria jam before taking a leisurely stroll to the belvedere terrace to absorb the unfeebly sheer drop to the sparkling Mediterranean below.
